Wendy Talbot PhD, CATE

Our facilitation philosophy

We take a collaborative approach to group-work that values all knowledge and experience and creates space for all participants to contribute. This includes varied and interactive teaching activities and safe and respectful learning environments.

We believe learning is a relational process. We are all in relationships - with ourselves, with others, life experiences and social and cultural contexts - that affect our learning.

People learn differently. Therefore, our training seeks to identify, build on and enhance current knowledge and experience of all participants.

Tailored training programmes

- Managing conflict and difficult situations
- Dealing with change
- Workplace Wellbeing approach
- JUST Leadership
- Fostering workplace relationships
- Addressing diversity, power and privilege
- Workplace culture
- Approaching retirement

If you have other training needs, talk to us. We may be able to develop and deliver them for you.
